Form W-2 is a mandatory form that must be completed by each employer. Form W-2 should not be filled out by the employee. It is given to inform the employee about the amount of his annual income and the taxes withheld from it. You can find a lot of information here: so you want to learn how to become a copywriter my younger friend? Well, it's very possible. In fact, there is no formal education that you need. Some of the highest paid copywriters in the world have never gone to college and did not study writing! No education! No formal training! Make a lot of money!!! Now before you start getting crazy, let me step you back into reality to be a copywriter:1.) What is copywriting? Copywriting is essentially moving words around to sell better. Let's say I work for a company that has a web page that gets 1 in 500 visitors to buy something. If I were a copywriter, I'd figure out how to make 1 out of 100 of these people buy. This means that 5 times more sales from the SAME web page! A good copywriter will understand how to do this with your own words, as well as how to retound photos and buttons to get more sales. A good copywriter is not just a writer. They are the sharp studier of human psychology for buying solutions!2.) Understand why people hire copywriters: Think about the huge amount of content many companies have to put out. One insurance company will have to put out all these things: Ads on TV Ads on Internet Ads on radio Brochures for B2C sales Brochures for B2B sales chu Brores for each different product Form to fill out forms, to fill for various ads Facebook ads Facebook products Mail their Facebook Update their Facebook page Make content for their website Make content for their website about every different product Make is sure that their content converts Make sure customers understand as signup Send packages of customers explaining their policy Have scenarios for their sales people to follow The Future Scripts for their customer support people to follow Reath Print Write The list goes on and on and on... Allllll of these things must be written or looked at by a copywriter. And this is just one example! Some companies will rely heavily on copywriters. Some companies (such as 37Signals) require that all team members be great writers before they ever start. So people will pay a copywriter good money to handle these things for them. But you are a young friend of mine, you must understand that in order to get this money, you have to maintain relationships within those companies that need these services. How to get clients as a freelance copywriter: This is by far the biggest question I get. And people seem to forget one thing: yourself as a freelance copywriter just like building a business from scratch. You have to put in a lot of effort at the beginning, show talent, not expect immediate wealth. There are no free lunches for boys and girls. Many people get fascinated by the prospect of working with their laptop anywhere in the world as a copywriter. In fact people go crazy when I go out photos like this from different places! Since all my copywriting business is conducted with a laptop, I can take off and go work from the beach. Or if I wanted to drum up an extra $10,000 very quickly..... I can just dedicate some of my hours to copywriting gigs. But these luxuries are the result of hard work, actual results, and existing exposures. This will not happen overnight for most copywriters. And probably never will be for many of them. However I'm setting up some of the ways I've personally seen people get amazing (and highly paid) copywriting gigs: METHOD #1.) It is becoming popular on the Internet as a copywriter. If you become known as a famous copywriting figure, you will build instant credibility. And if you have high authority, you can ask for more money. So how do I build confidence in my copywriting career? Building Copywriting Trust Step 1.) Practice what you preach: I originally ran a few businesses starting in high school and I first applied some copywriting techniques to the email list I had. METHOD #2.) Become popular in a particular niche So many lower copywriters will insist I can write everything! But actually they need to niche down when they start. For example, if you worked for a big health company and did a lot of writing for them, you should call yourself a copywriter who specializes in health space. This will make it easier to gain trust in a particular area. You probably wouldn't be a super-trust guy who mows the lawn for the financial council.....however you could really take his advice on how to hedge bushes and get a clean line on the edge of the lawn. He has very specific advice, and a lot of experience practicing what he says. Instead of just copywriter.....It would be better if you were a female copywriter who specializes in talking to 1st time expecting mothers. It would be better to hang out and network in places where people sell things for the first time to expectant mothers. If someone needs a copywriter and you have experience in exactly their niche..... Who has a high chance of getting a gig?? My personal niche started with small companies and daily deals. Then he moved into the middle business. However, if someone came up to me to write for the first time expectant mothers, I could do it but I have no experience and can't exactly relate to the struggles of that demographic. So I try to stick to my field of expertise so I can deliver the maximum results. METHOD #3.) Become popular for large companies it is a method that can be applied to certain people and be highly profitable. Let's say you worked for a big company in the marketing department and you were exposed to how big the marketing department tests and releases If you had to build a good little network in the same industry and then become a consultant with a very SPECIFIC experience, then you would get some other big companies to fork out for a lot of money. Smaller freelance concert concerts pay a few hundred dollars. But a huge corporation that makes an 8 month rollout of a $1,000,000 product will pay you some phat-able cash to make sure they do it right. Now I personally probably couldn't get one of these gigs because I've never worked for a huge company. This means that I lose a lot of credibility because I never walked. But if you have a very niche experience within a large corporation and had some big wins, you could become a very sought-after consultant. The cool part is you only need a few good contacts for this. I know someone who wrote an oil management program in the '70s that's still in use today. Until that day he gets a sweet theding gig from several companies just to be around if someone needs help in implementing it. Since the projects he advises for $2billion....., companies don't mind shelling out major cash just to keep it around. Boring? Yes. Yes. This is one of the advantages of working with a large company: You know how to implement projects within a large company. It's actually a rare skill. METHOD #4.) Get small concerts. Now there are some other ways to get copywriting gigs, but I've never seen anyone who ever made big money doing these things alone, so I'll just list them quickly: Posting on Fiverr for copywriting gigs. You'll definitely get some leads this way, but your clients tend to be bargain hunters rather than huge jobs. Accommodation on Craigslist as a copywriter for hire. This usually leads to corporate copywriter jobs that are relatively low-paid ($35,000-$45,000). Publication on UpWork as a copywriter for hiring. This will help you small and medium concert. It's not my favorite way to #5.) Post in Facebook groups where people can use copywriting services. I think this one is the easiest. Just go to groups such as Cult copying work council that you offer your services for a single time low price $xxxxx and what you rent. A lot of times people will bite. People are also constantly after concerts there, such as: Not all concerts will be good, but some will be. In the beginning you will have to scrape off the concerts, but if you start putting all your work into a simple portfolio, you can get steam. Which brings me to : Make a simple copywriting portfolio! Okay, listen to me carefully young dollar: You don't need a trendy website. In fact, I've never seen someone get a copywriting gig directly from their portfolio. Never!! The reason is that people want to hire you based on your copywriting skills. Not how fancy your site looks. This is a common mistake. See how crappy my copywriting is advising the page. This generates huge revenues, although it sucks super bad. The desire to buy is created from previous exposure to me, not the way the page looks. People will spend months and lots of money and time on a trendy website, only to realize no one IS TO it. The only people who go there are the people they meet directly and talk there. Best of all A copywriting portfolio is a simple page with the following elements: your name. Your Experience (Social Media? Landing Pages? A/B Testing?). A few examples of your work. How they can book a session with you. I know this sounds counterintuitive, but some of the best copywriting pages I've ever seen are a super simple one like this: Look how easy it is? It also leaves them with only one option of what to do next and that is to book a session with you. These sessions usually have to be at least $100. If the customer is not willing to pay at least $100 for a counseling session where you point out everything is wrong with their page, they are not going to buy anyway. My minimum consultation session is $597 now. And I learned on their way that if people aren't willing to pay, they won't be willing to pay you more (or they just can't afford it). Oddly enough, the more I charge for each hour of the session, the more respect and compliance I get from the client! They want to make sure they get their money out of this session, so they guarantee that they will show up on time and show prepared. Personally, I wouldn't do free sessions. Because what usually happens: 1.) Everyone gets excited about working together. 2.) You set up a meeting with this potential customer. 3.) You prepare for the meeting and make an offer. 4.) You talk to the client and tell him what you're going to do for them. 5.) They tell you: Let's talk again soon after I run this to my boss. 6.) You never say it again..... and all this time has been wasted. 7.) You become sad and poor:-(To people take you seriously, you have to charge them for your time. If they decide to go on a full contract with you, then you can comp their hour-long session. However, if they don't go with you, at least you still get paid. Charging people for your time is the surest way to make them appreciate your services. Every successful freelance copywriter I know always charges for their time. Some Copywriting Books for you to read: I've read a hell of a lot of copywriting books, and this is one I recommend you read to get off to a great start: BOOK 1.) Read Gary Hulbert's Letters (free) Start by reading Bor Letters. Make sure you print out each chapter for maximum effect! Ch 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25 Yam can also buy Bor Letters directly from Amazon. BOOK.) If you want a book that sits on your desk and can re-cover this course quickly, then grab my book called This Book will teach you how to write better from Amazon. BOOK 3.) Read The Promotional Secrets of Joseph Sugarman's Written Word. This book usually costs in the $30 range, but is one of my go-to books for ideas on how to position a copy. Almost every successful copywriter will this book. BOOK 4.) Also, check out Ogilvy's ad for David Ogilvy (great for traditional advertising tips as well) Your next steps to become a copywriter: I'm shown above in this one some good things to do in the first place: Read the copywriting book that I recommended above. Create a simple copywriting portfolio. Put yourself there. Well my young friend, I hope this answers your question!-n here's my list! It took a real long time to assemble and I'm sure I miss many. And I haven't read everything, but yes most of them.
